Yesterday he had completed twenty-five days of the sentence and friends came to his assistance and paid the balance of his fine. He walked about one block from the city hall and was again taken in the toils and turned over to the federal authorities to answer a government charge which had been lodged against him.

WORD FROM THE FRONT—Charles Woostenhulme, a motorman of the Phoenix Street Railway company, yesterday received a letter from his brother Norval who is now at the front with the Mediterranean expeditionary force, probably at the Dardanelles. He tried to tell him the letter just where he was but that information was covered by the censor's smudge. Also the date of his sailing from England and the point of sailing. The names of only two places escaped the attention of the censor. One of them was Northampton and the other Bedford. He writes that after landing he met an old acquaintance who had recovered after having been "gassed." In closing the letter he said that he expected momentarily to be called to the trenches.

THE COURTS—All of the forenoon of yesterday was given over in superior court to the settling of civil cases. There are 520 of them awaiting trial and only about half of them were set. They will cover the time, though, to November 2 in the afternoon. Judge Stanford's court sentences were passed upon several defendants who had pleaded guilty. G. Fritz Martin of Tempe, who had been arrested in connection with transactions in Crown Cider, was painfully surprised when a fine of $200 was imposed upon him. Mr. Martin explained to the court that he had bought the cider of a St. Louis concern on a $1,000 guarantee that it was not the kind of a beverage interdicted by the prohibition. But the effect of it upon citizens of Tempe was demoralizing, and an analysis of it revealed almost ten per cent of alcohol. Fidel Bracamonte a young boy who worked for Martin and who had actually sold the cider was given a suspended sentence.
